Bamboo Health

Reducing Recidivism and Connecting Justice Involved-Individuals to Behavioral Health Treatment

Incarceration alerting to coordinate care for America's at-risk populations

The Challenge

Approximately 44% of people in jail and 37% of those in prison have a mental illness. Still, only about 37% of those in state and federal prisons and less than half (45%) in local jails receive mental health treatment while incarcerated. Without a certain level of connectivity to jail and prison systems and the ability to pull incarceration and release data, it is extremely difficult to track individuals' incarceration statuses and maintain continuity of care.

The Solution

Bamboo's Justice Involved™ bridges the gap by connecting health plans, state governments, and providers to justice systems, capturing booking, incarceration and release data in real-time. With streamlined alert reporting, patients receive continuous care and timely assessment of treatment needs.

Justice Involved connects to nearly all jails and prisons in the U.S. and can alert managed care organizations, Medicaid, state administrators, providers and other stakeholders when individual's incarceration periods begin and end.

65%

of the nation's inmates meet certain medical criteria for substance abuse and addiction, but only 11% received treatment for their addictions.[1]

3x

Justice-involved individuals experience 3x the rate of mental illness compared to the general population

4x

Justice-involved individuals have 4x the rate of substance use disorder prevalence compared to the general population

By capturing essential booking and incarceration event information, stakeholders quickly evaluate an individual's need for mental health or substance use disorder treatment in near real-time. With the number of individuals eligible for Medicaid, States can potentially decrease the care cycles while improving the quality of care.

Typically, Medicaid does not cover services for individuals who are incarcerated. However, states with Section 1115 waivers can request partial waivers of this exclusion, allowing them to provide Medicaid coverage to certain groups of incarcerated individuals before their release. This can help ensure that individuals receive the necessary medical and mental health care as they prepare to reintegrate into society.

---

[1]The National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse – https://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/new-casa-report-finds-65-percent-of-all-us-inmates-meet-medical-criteria-for-substance-abuse-addiction-only-11-percent-receive-any-treatment-85448032.html

| 2,800	160+ Million	1+ Million	30%
Incarceration facilities on the Justice Involved network	historical incarceration records	new incarceration records per month	reduction in recidivism for one mountain state

Maintain continuity of care for incarcerated individuals

Real-time incarceration alerts allow for improved coordinated care through treatment referrals and engagement with individuals who may be at high risk of recidivism and SUD. Such alerts help divert incarceration events by referring individuals in need of care to the appropriate treatment. Given that the majority of these individuals are receiving or are eligible for Medicaid benefits, state Medicaid programs stand to save dollars while increasing the quality of care with this care coordination approach.

Full Justice Involved Lifecycle — Pre- and Post-Entry
How it works

Intercept

Event Pre and Post Booking → Identification of Diversion Candidates

OpenBeds | Treatment Connection

Diversion or Incarceration

Diversion to Care

Court Event → Incarceration → Pre-Release Services Identification

Treatment and/or Re-Entry

- Inpatient Treatment
- Partial Hospitalization
- Intensive Outpatient
- Outpatient Counseling
- Medication-Assisted Treatment
- Recovery Housing
- Recovery Support Services
- Residential Treatment Centers
- Youth Group Homes
- Youth Shelters
- Community Services

Justice Involved™

- Booking presents an opportunity to utilize Bamboo's offering to connect Justice Involved individuals to the care they need
- Justice Involved event alerts can initiate this workflow

OpenBeds® | Treatment Connection™

- For these individuals, Managed Care Organizations and other diversion groups can assess, triage, and navigate them into appropriate care settings
- OpenBeds will allow for referrals into Behavioral/Substance Use Disorder facilities and services

Pings™

- Pings (ADT notifications) will allow us to track these individuals at various care settings and monitor for new critical moments to see if they end up back in the Hospital or Emergency Department